GREYHOUNDS SUFFER SERIOUS INJURIES WHILE RACING

GREYHOUNDS ROUTINELY SUFFER SERIOUS INJURIES WHILE RACING

At dog tracks nationwide, greyhounds routinely suffer serious injuries. This includes dogs that suffer broken legs, paralysis, head trauma, and death from cardiac arrest.

- In Massachusetts, nearly 900 greyhound injuries were reported between 2002 and 2009, including dogs that suffered broken bones, paralysis and cardiac arrest. Nearly 80% of reported injuries involved broken legs.ⁱ
- In New Hampshire, nearly 1,200 greyhound injuries were reported at three dog tracks between 2005 and 2008.
- At a West Virginia dog track, more than 700 greyhound injuries were reported between January 2008 and September 2009. Also, more than 1,000 dogs were prevented from racing due to illness or injury.
- At two Arizona dog tracks in 2008, more than 500 greyhounds were reported as injured, too sick, or too hurt to race.ⁱⁱ
- Similar figures were reported in 2008 at dog tracks in Texas (342)ⁱⁱⁱ, Iowa (101)^{iv}, Wisconsin (361)^v and Kansas (80)^{vi}.
